

Sinclair Broadcast Group's recent decision to air a highly partisan program calculated to influence voters under the banner of "documentary" (now revised to "news") is the worst sort of abuse of public airwaves.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. The large companies that control the airwaves have an obligation to think less the bottom line and more of what we need for our democracy.

The FCC has an obligation to both shape and enforce legislation that helps make this happen. Revising media ownership rules is one place to start.

Thank you.
